SITE MANAGER

You no longer need a person to keep your website up to date.

A website for cafés, bars and restaurants that the owner runs from the chat app they already use. The same message posts to Instagram.

Menus change every day. Websites don't.

47.4%

of Bulgarian food and hotel businesses with 10+ staff have a website. The EU average is 76.5%.

250–500 €

for a Sofia agency to build a site, then 50–250 € a month for someone to keep it up.

Every day

the lunch special, a sold-out dish or holiday hours change. Owners post it on Instagram; the site stays wrong.

Site and Instagram

Updates the site and posts to Instagram: post or story.

The owner writes, messy is fine	Site Manager does
"banitsa's gone"	Sold out, back by itself at tomorrow's opening
"coffees up 10%, round it"	Every coffee +10%, rounded; all prices shown first
"take the cake off" (two cakes)	Asks: "Chocolate or lemon cake?" It doesn't guess.

Who it's for

Every small business

with no web person.

Hospitality gains the most

Their menus change every day.

> Simulated owner panel: the only 2 buyers out of 20 were daily-menu owners.

Panel: 20 simulated Sofia owners, run twice. Simulated buyers surface objections; real sign-ups confirm demand.

Sold by till resellers

Every venue must have a fiscal till, so these people know every owner and visit regularly. They keep 15% and invoice locally.

Greece: small firms start e-invoicing on 2 November 2026, so resellers are visiting every venue right now.
